JAMES M'KEEN TELLS OF A PLEDGE OF MONEY ASKED FOR.

Col. Dady Says He Never Made a Demand of $10,000 for Campaign Purposes -Did Say to Ogden That $5,000 Was Expected if Mckeen Was Nominated.

The Republican judiciary convention for the nomination of a Justice of the Supreme Court in the Second district as the successor of Justice W. W. Goodrich will be held at noon to-day in the County Court House in Brooklyn. The delegates will number 287, 130 being from Kings county, and the remaining 107 from the nine other counties. A big crop of candidates recently sprang up, and when the Republican executive committee of Kings county met on Wednesday to consider their respective claims no ticket follows: less than eight names were presented, including those of Assistant Corporation Counsel James McKeen, at present in charge of the Law Department in Brooklyn; former Corporation Counsel Joseph A. Burr, Hugo Hirsh and Municipal Court Justice Girard B. Ver Wart.

The executive committeemen were so divided in their preferences that it was found impossible to secure a majority indorsement for any particular candidate, and the committee unanimously recommended the delegates from Kings county to hold a conference ahead of the meeting of the convention, and, if possible, agree upon a candidate to be presented to that

At the session of the executive committee Mr. McKeen and Mr. Burr received the most support, and it was supposed that one of them was most likely to be the nominee. Yesterday, however, the friends of Justice Van .Wart were claiming that he had received pledges from a majority of the Kings county delegates.

last night there were rumors of political scandal of no small proportions in connection with the judicial nomination. These were in effect that Col. Michael J. Dady had made a proposition through a third person to Mr. McKeen substantially promising him the nomination in case he made a pledge to make a contribution of $10,000 te the campaign fund. Col. Dady, according to the rumors, desired the third person to call the attention of Mr. McKeen to the fact that in addition to the great judicial distinction involved, the office extended over a period of fourteen years, the emoluments aggregating $245,000, and that in view of these facts a campaign contribution of $10,000 was a modest one.

The third person, said to be a man of social distinction and a high municipal officer, is described as having made no reply to Col. Dady's suggestion, but to have gone directly to Mr. McKeen and told him of the $10,000 proposition and received his prompt and emphatic refusal to consider t in any manner.

The "third party," when seen last night, confirmed the story in its substantial outlines, averring that he had been told by Col. Dady that Mr. McKeen would be expected to contribute about the sum stated for campaign purposes in case he received

Mr. McKeen said: "The matter of pledging a contribution to the campagn fund in the event of my nomination was brought to my attention. There was no exact amount stated, but it was mentioned to my friends, and I understood it to be quite a liberal one. I declined to make any pledge whatever. I regard the making of a pledge of this kind as a most insidious form of corruption in American politics. I am absolutely opposed to it, and absolutely and positively refused to consider

When seen last night in reference to the as has been alleged in reference to Mr. McKeen and the judiciary nomination. These are the facts on which this story is based. A few days ago, when the nomina tion was being discussed and candidates considered, it was remarked that whoever the candidate would be it would cost him considerable money to pay the usual contributions to the campaign committee in the ten counties in the district, especially as there were no State candidates running this year. I subsequently told some of Mr. McKeen's friends in the First Assembly district that he had an excellent chance to secure the nomination and that as a matter of friendship to him they should get together and see that the contribution to the campaign funds would be forthcoming.

"I did this as I understood Mr. McKeer himself was not a rich man. I mentioned the matter among others to Col. Willis L. Ogden, the president of the Civil Service Commission, one of Mr. 'McKeen's close personal friends, who was urging him for the nomination. I told Col. Ogden that the Kings County Campaign Committee would expect Mr. McKeen, should he be the candidate, to contribute $5,000 to the campaign fund and that the assessments by the campaign committees in the other nine counties would probably range from $250 to $500.

"I simply told Col. Ogden of the usual procedure in regard to indicate as well as procedure in regard to judicial as well as other candidates for important offices, but made no suggestion even that Mr. McKeen would not receive the nomination unless he made a pledge to contribute $5,000 or any other amount. Political campaigns cannot be run with an empty treasury, and the candidates or their friends are always expected to contribute and I are always expected to contribute, and I have no doubt that both Mr. McKeen and Col. Ogden will admit this. In this transaction there was no attempt to barter away a judicial nomination or to place Mr. McKeen in any questionable position."

First of all we place the question whether those laws shall continue which put the livelihood of 80,000,000 of people in the power of the few, which enabled the same hands that control the railroads to control the mnes, that control the banks to control the Ireasury, that own the people's necessities to own the people's government. The trusts, monopolies made by law, intrenched behind a prohibitive tariff, and buttressed by subsidies and special rates, plunder our people with one hand while with the other they reach for conquest, and sell their product cheap abroad that they may sell it dear at home. We despise the hypocrisy which outdoes Populism in placing the Treasury money at the service of favored banks and breaks laws to favor Wall Street speculators. We favor the immediate regulation of trusts under the interstate commerce and taxation powers of Congress, and the admission free of duty of articles controlled by the trusts, raw materials of manufacture, and the necessaries of life.

GOV. GARVIN RENOMINATED.

Senator Aldrich's Brother Running on Democratic Ticket in Rhode Island. PROVIDENCE, Oct. 1 .- The Democratic State convention held here to-day was comparatively a peaceful affair, the "scraps" being of only minor importance. Gov.

Garvin was renominated. The following s the full ticket: For Governor-Lucius F. C. Garvin.
For Lieutenant-Governor-Adeland Archam

For Secretary of State-JOHN J. GELMEARTIN. For Attorney-General—CLARENCE A. ALDRICE. For General Treasurer—CLAREN POTTER.

The nominee for Attorney-General is a brother of United States Senator Nelson W. Aldrich. The brothers are of different political beliefs.

There is no reference to national politics in the platform, but a general appeal is made to Republicans to join with the Democrats in saving the State.

One of the delegates from Newport was the twenty-two year-old son of Judge John Clinton Gray of the New York Court of Appeals. He has become a citizen of Newport.

BAY STATE TARIFF PLANK. What Republicans Will Say About Possible Changes in the Law.

BOSTON, Oct. 1 .- There was plenty of enthusiasm at the customary "night before" gathering of the Massachusetts Republicans in the American House this evening. Secretary Moody of the Navy Department, who is to preside at to-morrow's convention, was present, as was ex-Gov. Crane, who drafted the resolutions. The platform will indorse Roosevelt and declare that if changing conditions require a modification of the tariff the Republican party is the only one that can safely do the job. Mob rule will be denounced.

Syracuse Republican City Ticket. SYRACUSE, Oct. 1 .- Alan C. Fobes was nominated for Mayor to-night by the Republican city convention. Mayor J. B. Kline, who made a fight against the machine for a renomination, received only 25 votes, while Fobes received 132. Kline's name was cheered to the echo and his sup-porters moved to make Fobes's nomination unanimous.

The other nominations were: President of the common council, John D. Sadler; comptroller, Eugene J. Mack; city treasurer, Frank W. Traugott; municipal court urer, Frank W. Haddott, industrial Contribudge, W. G. Cady; school commissioners, Mrs. Etta Elsner Falker, Dr. John Van Duyn, George W. Schilly and H. W. Greenland; assessors, Fred D. Traub and William S. McMahon.

Republican Assembly Nominations in Eric County.

BUFFALO, Oct. 1 .- At the Republican Assembly district conventions held in Erie county to-day nominations were made as follows: First district, Jeremiah Nehin Second district, Robert Lynn Cox; Third district, convention adjourned, no quorum Fourth district, William Tenjost; Fifth Fourth district, William Tenjost; Fifth district, former Assemblyman Charles F. Brocks, who was defeated last election by seven votes by Charles W. Hinson; Sixth district, George Ruehel; Seventh district John K. Patton of Tonawanda; Eighth district, Elijah A. Cook of Hamburg.

Named for the Assembly. ROCHESTER, Oct. 1.-Charles E. Callahan was nominated for the Assembly by Republicans in the Third Monroe district to-night. He has been a clerk in the Corporanight. He has been a cierk in the Corpora-tion Counsel's office for four years. Eugene J. Dwyer declined renomination.

JUDGE BENNETT NAMED AGAIN. Will Run as a Republican for a Place on the Municipal Court Bench. Judge W. S. Bennett of the Municipal Court of the Twelfth district was nominated for reelection last night by the Republican District Convention, at 157 West Ninety-seventh street. He was appointed Judge by Mayor Low last June.

CHINESE JAILED; WOMEN WEEP

SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS CALL ON PUPILS IN CELLS.

Leave Fruit, Coffee, Dainties and Money to Buy Cigarettes for the Laundry men and Say That the Girls on Whose Charges Eight Were Held Are to Blame.

On information furnished by girls of ender age the police of the Gates avenue station in Brooklyn rounded up and arrested all of the Chinese laundrymen they could find yesterday in the outlying wards of Brooklyn. Later some of them were discharged for lack of evidence. According to the statement made last night by Police Captain Buchanan, who superintended the work of raiding, many of the Chinamen learned what was to happen and fled after closing up their places of busi-

More arrests will follow to-day, for Capt. Buchanan says that not less than fifty Chinese laundrymen, whose places are in the Stuvyesant Heights district, which is one of the choice residential sections of Brookivn, are implicated. In connection with the case, warrants have been issued for the arrest of a married woman, a Chinese merchant and a girl 17 years old all of whom, the police say, were in a plot to bring about the ruin of Brooklyn girls. Of the Chinamen arrested yesterday, four were discharged for lack of evidence. Two were committed to Raymond Street Jail under heavy bail. Four are now locked up in the Gates avenue police station. The Chinamen held are Hu Tom. 22 years old, 414 Sumner avenue, Charles Woh, 40 years old, 1988 Fulton street; Charles Shue, 25 years old, 343 Sumner avenue; Tom Yen, 30 years old, 1988 Fulton street, John Yuhn, 25 years old, 106 Rockaway avenue; Tony Jim, 28 years old, 106 Rockaway avenue.

The white girls under arrest are Lizzie Kane, 17 years old, 1518 Broadway, Williamsburg, and Mamie Brennan, 14 years old, of 207 Ralph avenue.

Tom, Woh and the two girls were arraigned in the Gates avenue police court at noon yesterday. Tom was committed to Raymond Street Jail in default of $5,000 bail and Woh in default of $2,500 bail.

The Brennan girl was committed to the care of the Children's Society and the Kane girl was sent to the House of the Good Shepherd, where she will be held until next Monday, when the examinations of all of the prisoners will take place.

The other prisoners were taken into custody after the closing of the court. They will be arraigned to-day before Magistrate Furlong.

Police Captain Buchanan had received many complaints from the mothers of young girls and had issued special orders to his men to watch laundries. Policeman Mc-Groover kept a sharp watch over Hu Tom's laundry in Sumner avenue. He saw the Kane girl and her companion enter Tom's laundry about 11 o'clock yesterday mornng. A few minutes later he saw the Chinaman tock the front door. At this time the girls were in a rear room. The policeman crossed the street and broke open the door. He found the Kane girl in the Chinaman's bunk. The Brennan girl was seated on a chair. The policeman said he had secured sufficient evidence to send the Chinaman to Sing Sing.

Magistrate Furlong questioned the girls. They we pt as they confessed that they were members of an organized gang who made it a practice to procure girls for Chinese laundrymen. A woman named Kratz, they said, was the organizer of the gang. The money they received amounted to $5 or $10 a day. Some of it went to their parents, who thought the girls were working in a department store.

ast night many fashionably dres women visited the Gates avenue police station and wept in the corridors of the cells where the Chinamen were confined. They told Police Captain Buchanan that they were the Sunday school teachers of the Chinamen behind the bars. The Chinamen nodded assent and explained to their teachers that it was not their own fault that they had fallen from grace, but the fault of the girls who complained.

The majority of the women who called at the station were young and comely. Two told the captain that they would pledge their jewelry to obtain funds for Hu Tom's Soon after 6 o'clock the first woman missionary entered the police station.

"I would like to see Charley Shue," she Who are you?" inquired Capt. Buchanan.

"Who are you?" inquired capt. Buchanan.
"I am his Sunday school teacher," said the young woman. "My name is Miss Dot Livingston."

"Miss Livingston," said the captain,
"this Chinaman is held on a serious charge.
He is not in the cells here, but has been ne is not in the cens here, out has been committed to Raymond Street Jail. The charge against him has been made by a fourteen-year-old girl."

"The police ought to have spanked her instead of paying any attention to her

"The police ought to have spanked her instead of paying any attention to her story," remarked Miss Livingston. Two young women who said they were from the Friends' Chinese Mission in Monroe street called and left a kettle of conee, some sandwiches and a basket of fruit for Charley Woh. The captain learned some sandwiches and a basket of Trute for Charley Woh. The captain learned that they were members of a Baptist church in the neighborhood.

A Chinaman, who said he was Thomas Wah, a missionary connected with the Tompkins Avenue Methodist Church's mission on Myrtle avenue, called. He was accompanied by a man who introduced himself to Capt. Buchanan as Mr. Warner. They wanted to see Hu Tom, who, Wah explained, was one of the pillars in the Chinese mission connected with the Tompkins Avenue Methodist Church.

"My wife and her lady friend are outside," said Warner. "May I call her in?"

"Certainly," said Capt. Buchanan.

Warner went to the door and beckened to two women who were on the stoop. One, who appeared to be about 22 years old, was

"I am Mrs. Nellie Warner," she said, "and "I am Mrs. Nellie warner, she said, and I am arxious to see Hu Tom. I do not care to give my address, but I would like to talk with him for a few minutes."

"We found your address in one of the prisoners' pockets," explained Capt. Buchanan. "Here it is, Mrs. Nellie Warner, 127 Levington avenue."

Buchanan. "Here it is. Mrs. Nellie Warner, 737 Lexington avenue."

"I don't know how he got my address." said young Mrs. Warner, "but I am a teacher in the Myrtle avenue mission and the only one I am acquainted with is Hu Tom, who is my Sunday school pupil."

Mrs. Warner talked with three of the prisoners and after glancing at the fourth said that she was not acquainted with any of them.

"I am acquainted with the two in the jail," she said. "One of them. Hu "I am acquainted with the two in the jail," she said. "One of them, Hu Tom, is a quiet, peaceable fellow. He is my scholar. It's a shame to have him and the others here locked up. Those girls who complained ought to be sent to prison for long terms. They are more to blame than these poor Chinamen. They tear down what we build up. It would serve the girls right if they were sentenced to a long term."

After the Warner party left the station two women called and introduced them-selves as Chinese Sunday school teachers from New York. They asked permission to leave some cake and pies for the prison-ers and one of them handed over a two-dollar bill to buy cigarettes for the pris-

Three women with bunches of roses and bags of apples and oranges came next. These also declared that the girl complainants deserved to be punished instead of the Chinamen.

Central office detectives will help the precinct police to-day in their efforts to find other Chinamen against whom complaints have been made anybody interested enough to inquire should-know it.

He was the eldest son of the Hon. Courtenay John Vernon, rector of Grafton Underwood, Northamptonshire, who died on July 2, 1892. On the death of the second Baron Lyveden, nine years later, Courtenay Robert Percy Vernon succeeded in the title and estates, which include some 15,000 acres of land in Northamptonshire. Since the death of his uncle, whose successor he became, the present Baron has done nothing more exciting than sit in the House of Lords, manage his estates and occasionally conduct a party of British notables to some near or distant part of the world.

It was before he became a lord that this son of a clergyman did things in the way of earning a living that would have done credit to the most venturesome Yankee.

When a youth he thought he wanted to go into the army, and for the service he was educated. But though he was perfectly willing to fight, he wasn't willing to study books to learn how. Therefore, when he came up for his final examination, he flunked miserably, and his father concluded that the young man's army career was ended.

But the rector didn't quite know his son Only a few days after the young man had failed in his examinations he enlisted in the Royal Artillery. He stayed there just the Royal Arthery. He stayed there just eight months.

Then he decided that he'd like to be an actor. He had been to the theatre a few times, and he was sure that, with a little practice, he could play parts as well as anybody he'd ever seen on the stage. Therefore, having bought his discharge, he haunted the London theatres for a job. Finally, in 1882, he got one at the Hayhaunted the London theatres for a job. Finally, in 1882, he got one at the Haymarket Theatre with the Bancrofts, who were then playing "The Overland Route." Just how he got it he has never been quite able to explain, but Bancroft cast him for the part of Capt. Seabright in the play.

He did well enough with the Bancrofts. He did well enough with the Bancrofts He did well enough with the Bancrotts to get an engagement the next year to play Henry Beauclerc in "Diplomacy." Later he played Tony Lumpkin in "She Stoops to Conquer."

All the while he was on the stage, though, he had an all consuming idea to see the world, and particularly what the United States were like. So, three or four years after he had made his début on thestage, young Vernon sailed, as a first cabin passen-ger, for New York. When he arrived here

"When I left home," said the Baron yesterday, at the Murray Hill Hotel, where he and his party are staying, "I was sure I had enough in me clothes to buy half New York. But when I had been here a day and a half, and had got rid of most of the £4 I had with me when I landed, I realized that I' have to be doing something or starve. What the devil to do I didn't know. But I found my way to the Bowery, and when I was about opposite the old Thalia Theatre I saw a sign in front of a cheap restaurant which said that a waiter was wanted inside.

"Goin' back home again I shipped as a steward on a mail steamer, the Nile, running to South American' ports. It was all illigant' work as our Irish friends say, that I did on that steamer. I swabbed that I did on that steamer. I swabbed the decks and cleaned the staterooms until I could scrub with the finest scrub lady in this land. Not long after that I got a job as steward on the old American liner Paris. I guess I was a fair steward, be-Paris. I guess I was a fair steward, because they promoted me to assistant purser. "I had other sea experiences, did plenty of hard work and did it as well as I could. Then my father called me off, and I went home. In 1890 I did the most sensible thing I ever did in my life. I got married to the daughter of Major Hin of Wollaston Hall, Northampton. Then I settled down as much as I could, earned my own living and every now and then got up one of these towns. When my uncle died and I succeeded to the title and estates, I had to get a bit more dignity, look solemn and sit in a bit more dignity, look solemn and sit in the House of Lords on a Liberal bench. "The only skylarkin' I've done since has been a tour, now and then, like the one we're on now. The members of the party pay me so much, according to steamer accommodations and such, and I attend to all details, pay all expenses, and the difference between what the trip for the party costs and what the members pay me is my profit."

The third Baron Lyveden is trying to arrange a trip for this winter to the Holy Land, Egypt and the Nile, made up of prominent men and women of New York and London. Among the party he conducted through Canada were the following:

Lord and Lady Bray, Cumming Macdona, M. P., a cousin of Henry D. Macdona, the New York lawyer; Sir Edward Clarke, who was the British Solicitor-General in Lord Salisbury's second Cabinet, and the latter's son. Percival Clarke: George Doughty. son, Percival Clarke; George Doughty, M. P.; Col. S. A. Sadler, M. P. for Middles-borough, and Mrs. Sadler, and G. A. Allen, Conservative Parliamentary candidate for DELAWARE DISTURBS ROOSEVELT Her Senators Present Rival Candidates for Byrne's Place.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.-The Republican factional quarrels in Delaware were carried to the White House to-day by Senators Allee and Ball, and there is reason to believe that President Roosevelt was far from pleased. The interview between the Delaware Senators and the President was not at all harmonious, for Mr. Roosevelt is out of patience with the continued bickerings of the factional leaders over the Federal patronage. The chief purpose of the visit was to discuss the appointment of a successor to William Michael Byrne, who resigned his office as United States Attorney. Senahis office as United States Attorney. Sena-tor Allee, the leader of the Addicks faction, presented the name of Walter H. Hayes of Wilmington, and Senator Ball, repre-senting the regular Republicans, recom-mended John P. Neilds, also of Wilmington. Mr. Neilds is now acting as District Attorney under appointment by the Federal judge in Delaware. The President tried to bring the Senators to an agreement, but he came the Senators to an agreement, but he came nowhere near success.

After the interview with the President, senators Allee and Ball declined to make any statement. They wouldn't even say whether the Todd postmastership matter was mentioned. It is known, however, that President Roosevelt is entirely satisfied that a successor to Miss Todd should have been appointed. Senators Allee and Ball declined to make

FIGHT AT CASINO STAGE DOOR. Two Artists Who Said They Wanted to Paint Miss Templeton the Victims.

Two Frenchmen, who said they were Herman Morette and Louis Gaviue, artists, living at 329 Fifth avenue, got into a fight at the Casino Theatre stage door last night when the show was over. The two appealed to Policeman Heuck of the Tenderloin station, whom they found on Broadway. Their faces were covered with blood and their clothing much disarranged. The appearance of the two men drew a large crowd, and extra policemen were summoned to clear the street. The artists were unable to ideptify their assailants and finally went home. According to the management the two have been haunting the stage door for the past two weeks and in broken English have asked chorus girls and others to point out Fay

Templeton, whose portrait they wished to paint.

Miss Templeton goes home from the theatre each night in a carriage and is always accompanied by her aunt, Mrs. Belle Adams. Last night Doorkeeper Foley escorted Miss Templeton to her carriage, and then went inside to find Mrs. Adams, who was talking with some one.

When he appeared on the sidewalk with Mrs. Adams, he says, Morette rushed up and exclaimed:

exclaimed: "Ah! There is the Templeton." Foley says that he waved the artist aside, but that he insisted on an interview. Thereupon a crowd of stage door hanger on pitched into the two. Some chorus girls out at this time also took a hand in the fight.

Mrs. Adams meantime was pushed into the waiting carriage and with Miss Templeton was driven away. When the cop hove in sight every one but the two artists fled. ORITI ARV
